WE

HATE

An Oregon Commentator alumnus once said, "Sticking your head in the clouds and pretending the world is always a beautiful place may be appealing, but is not reality." Oregon Alum and famous northwest author Chuck Palahniuk wrote, "When we don't know who to hate, we hate ourselves," in his 1999 book Invisible Monsters. We have the right to hate in that essential right to express how we feel, guaranteed by those first two Amendments to the U.S. Constitution. Being offended is a right, as well. The truth is that there is nothing wrong with being offended. One may very well disagree with another or even call the other an ass-jabbering shit-tard. Nothing happens. And we at the Oregon Commentator and America don't like being told what to think, say or do.

Most people can agree on the importance of civil liberties. Indeed it is a very broad idea and sounds smart when you say it. However, on this campus, most people's understanding of what "liberty" is begins to break down at the border of thought and action. The First Amendment protects our freedoms of speech and of association. IFUCK OSPIRGI As disheartening as it may be, people feel anger and hatred and have a right to it. It's more extreme forms, racism and bigotry are wrong and beneath us-- this is all too true. However, censorship and repression is also wrong and beneath us. The marketplace of ideas is free and open.

Forcing people to "like" other people or things simply creates more animosity. What's more, creating arbitrary victim groups and assuming that all members of said group will feel or react a certain way to some questionable opinion is childish, petty, patronizing and, therefore, ultimately more offensive than the original opinion.

If people like Ann Coulter weren't allowed to say horribly racist or ignorant things like, "She ought to be in prison for wearing a hijab," than she wouldn't be able to expose herself for the horribly racist and ignorant person that she is. We can look at the local Pacifica Forum controversy of past years in the same light: If Holocaust-denying Nazi apologists weren't allowed to express their insane views, we would not know who they are or how to address such things.

This current trend in government and society to discourage the expression of hate in its essence spells danger for the United States. It is a waste of time, money and effort. Morality and social change require time and willful enlightenment. If the hippie extremists and the peace mongers were successful in stamping out mean feelings and unpopular belief, we'd all be shitting rainbows. Real life isn't like that. Many theories and beliefs deemed common sense today have undergone some intense revision. We must all remember that vision is never 20-20, not even in hindsight.

Hate is a powerful emotion, usually charged with icky feel-bads. Its ugly alternatives are blind acceptance and forced compromise. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose from open discourse. This is why hate most certainly cannot be contained. Instead it must be expressed and expelled in all directions. Release your hate. Embrace your hate. Share your hate.

WINNER!

I hate the new Eugene plastic bag ban. Spilling my groceries all over the street is a great start to the week. I hope the environment reimburses me for the dozen eggs that slammed into the pavement when my shitty paper bag broke. There is a reason that people like to use plastic bags, they work and they have little fucking hoops so your can carry your shit. And no, i’m not going to buy the fucking reusable bags.

The city has taken away our bagging rights. In exchange we get to fumble around in parking lots with our merchandise. Perhaps we should simply go along with the city’s bullshit, and purchase 4 or 5 environmentally friendly bags. I hate the idea of having to haul around little totes everytime I want to buy multiple items. Fuck that, and fuck paying for paper bags...

Maybe next we should decide to ban all plastic items. They are all bad for the environment right? No more water bottles, pong balls, or sunglasses. Fuck it. Why stop there? We can all just grow our own food, so we don’t need to go shopping. We can set up little hippie communes, raise chickens, and we won’t shower. We can all sit in a circle, and sing little songs about how the corporations are destroying the world. We’ll all stop wearing shoes, smell like shit, and do whatever the hell else they do on 16th and Alder...

Less Apathetic Times

OSPIRG's website is purposefully confusing about whether Oregon State PIRG and Oregon Student PIRG is responsible for the outlandish accomplishments it describes. They also lie:

We are 100% funded by students. Not labor unions, rich New Yorkers, trial lawyers, or the college administration. No offense to these folks (many of them are wonderful people), but by keeping our funding strictly from students, we ensure that we are always accountable to students and students only.

What does OSPIRG really do for students, save for make empty promises? OSPIRG operates under the guise of empowering students and telling them that they have a voice. Then, they turn right around and pay themselves to be your voice! In the very least, OSPIRG is a piss-poor duplication of services.

OSPIRG is easy to hate. However, my hate runs even deeper than the creepy crawlies on my skin that those wide-eyed, clipboard-touting harpies give me. It runs deeper than the sneer I adorn when I hear the lofty promises of paid "directors" generalizing Oregon State PIRG's "accomplishments". Oregon Student PIRG (which is "different" from, but totally controlled by, the Oregon State PIRG) allegedly contributes to making a "better world" through "nonpartisan" policies. There are three fundamental problems with OSPIRG that simply make it unfundable as well as unconstitutional (and these statements could not be further from the realm of the hyperbolic-- this can't be stressed enough. What you are reading are the facts).

Student money goes off-campus, to an "advocate" without any accountability whatsoever.

OSPIRG received $314,500 from students all over Oregon for the 2012-2013 school year. Over half of that money came from the students of UO, $170,000 total! $249,920 went to personnel costs (OSPIRG states "This is the most important part of the budget"). OSPIRG is the opposite of the Oregon Student Association or United States Student Association. OSA takes students to Salem for free without paying an outsider, actually working to involve students in the process. OSPIRG claims to be 100% accountable to students but this is a lie. We have no control over what issues it concerns itself with.

All they are successful in is proving that apathy and misrepresentation have reached epidemic proportions. The most you hear and see of OSPIRG is in it's defunded form when it needs your "support" most-- in the form of a signature or vote to refund the pig-faced snake in the grass. OSPIRG's marketing strategy is very slick, and it's hard to get rid of the OSPIG once it secures funding.

OSPIRG is a charity

It's great that students want to contribute money to anything that doesn't deliver them pizza. However, the forced donation to a charitable cause is not a service to students and neither is the political agenda of OSPIRG, no matter how well-intended. There is nothing wrong with charity. However, because OSPIRG classifies itself as a 501(c)(3), a charitable cause,

$550 million in corporate tax breaks revealed

Since the start of 2012, the recipients of over $550 million in corporate tax breaks is now online, thanks in part to the research and public education efforts of OSPIRG and others.

it is legally un-fundable by the ASUO. Senate Rule 12.5(a)(M) states:

“at no time may incidental fee monies be donated to charitable causes.” The manner in which OSPIRG operates needs to be re-worked so that supporters can opt-in. The fact that students have this fee pushed upon them with no opportunity to opt-out is an unconstitutional travesty. For the 2012-2013 school year, OSPIRG was supported by Ben Bowman and the ACFC and approved by the ASUO Senate and Ben Eckstein. Meanwhile students like you and me were robbed of their freedom of association.

OSPIRG epitomizes viewpoint discrimination.

Freedom of association and freedom of speech are jokes to OSPIRG. If OSPIRG worked solely on willful donations (as opposed to stealing Incidental Funds from students), there would be absolutely nothing wrong with it. Students that support OSPIRG and it's agenda have every right to do so. However, funding OSPIRG through the Incidental Fund suggests that those who advocate a contrary issue are wrong. OSPIRG takes your money and costs you your freedom of association. Here is where the hypocrisy flares up like an outbreak of herpes:

While arguing in their administrative purpose statement that their “advocates” are needed to “run with the big dogs” in politics, they run a campaign titled, “Get Big Money Out of Politics”. This is exactly what every lobbyist group says. If you are actually supportive of the OS-PIG, then you should step up and personally contribute.

The government can go ahead and spend our money on wars and the UO can go ahead and spend our money on the Jacqua Center. These actions are totally legal-- but it is wrong for any organization to force a fee upon students while simultaneously relieving them of their rights to protest, petition and speak for themselves.

So, how is this different from the OSA or the Oregon Commentator, you ask? The OSA empowers students directly, by giving them the means to have their voice heard. Meanwhile, the OC is comprised of students, for students and by students. The majority of our allotted funds goes to producing a magazine that does not aim to represent students as a whole, but rather confront students with alternative schools of thought and to remind them not to take life too seriously.

Why is it so hard to realize OSPIRG for the pig-faced snake in the grass that it is? They claim that the “ethics of democracy” are at the core of their ideology. They tout the creed of student autonomy and student empowerment. By receiving incidental fee monies, OSPIRG simultaneously spits in the face and cums on the back of student autonomy and the democratic principle. All they really do is refill their trough with slaw: the Incidental Fund. They fucked us and didn't even plant a tree, help a single disenfranchised person, nor buy us dinner first.

Dick Hateblad is the Editor-In-Chief at the OREGON COMMENTATOR and is a strong supporter of wind mills, regardless of your presuppositions.

Contrary to the nature of popular dialogue and what many would like to believe, the University of Oregon is discriminatory in practice. The school has an amazing ability to divide and conquer the student body so that all groups are ineffective. Greek life is a system in itself that promotes wealth, like-mindedness, docile women, and overbearing men. The hippies are intensely suspicious of those who are not in their immediate social circle and view themselves as holier-than-thou. Foreign students are confined to their cultural groups and the Mills International Center. And student athletes are resented because of all the freebies and advantages that the rest of the student body pays for.

Diversity is something that is widely preached at the UO. Simply based on their spruced up public-relations campaign in the past four years one would think that this school contained a beautiful array of white, yellow, brown, and black skin. Yet behind this façade lies the ugly truth. And that is that the school doesn't believe in diversity. It seems that diversity is only worthwhile when there is something to be gained. This school has bastardized what should be a beautiful concept. In an effort to claim a diverse student body the school did three things: It recruited more foreign students (who pay significantly more), it recruited more black athletes, and decreased enrollment of poor whites. Eventually this school would like to go the University of Washington route: in-state residents will be the minority while a dominant body of rich out-of-state and foreign students will be encouraged to attend.

This university is a slimy, dishonest place because it is a reflection of the administration. Publicly owned property has very thorough and expensive building codes but our university took short cuts in order to build the Jacqua Center and many of Phil Knights philanthropic projects. The university sold the land to Uncle Phil for a negligible amount and Phil built whatever he wanted, not having to follow public building codes (he also used a Californian construction crew to build the Matthew Knight Arena, why support workers in Oregon?). He then "donated" the building to the university. The school is very proud of its new facilities which are exclusionary in nature, and that's fine. Except that uncompromising building codes exist for a reason, so that construction crews think things through and do things right the first time around. Not even two years later the Jacqua Center suffered massive flood damage from a leaky water fountain, which cost lots of money that the university claims insurance will pay for (we are in the midst of filing a public records request because the school has a tendency to lie). Going to the dentist is more fun than attaining primary information that the school does not want to share.

When I was a baby-faced freshman working at the Oregon Commentator on the HATE issue I was taken aback by how much passion was being displayed over the "I Hate the University of Oregon" article. I thought, how could anyone hate this school? Why would you say that!? Well I have one term left and let me tell you: I hate this place and I genuinely wish that I went to Corvallis instead.

So after four years of this bullshit, I say good riddance to the UO. I am done and this is over.

Shit-For-Brains is the Publisher at the OREGON COMMENTATOR and forgot to say FUCK OSPIRG!

BLEEDING HEART LIBERALS

I hate bleeding heart good-for-nothing liberals. These people (with good intentions) don't have the sense to do anything that will actually help people. Liberals just want more laws to be passed in order to feel like they did something.

America is dealing with epidemic levels of morbid obesity, and they want to ban large sugary drinks, put calorie counts on menus, take Snickers out of the vending machines etc. They pat their backs and feel good for fighting obesity. Never mind the fact that I can buy two sodas, I do not care what the calorie count is on the menu and I stopped at the quickie mart and picked up a King-Size Snickers. I am getting fatter and now there is one less person flipping burgers, selling vending machines or stocking large soda cups because it cost more money to follow the new regulations (whoops).

Criminals are killing people, so they want the Executive to pass laws requiring a painstaking universal background check and limiting the number of bullets we can buy. Then the only one with a weapon and enough ammo will be Mr. Criminal who left both his civil law book at home. Criminals usually do that. And didn't you know that they leave their Good Samaritan card at home too? It's so that when they cross that line unto a school campus (right passed the GUN FREE ZONE sign) with their big black gun veiled by a trench coat, the Bad Samaritan alarm doesn't go off. There, now you know how it works.

America has a tolerance issue so they want to force diversity and tolerance down our throats. The consensus on this campus is that we have to accept and adhere to the latest and greatest anti-hate school of thought, but they'll be damned if a conservative expresses his or her reverence of civil liberties. Remember, tolerance doesn't only go one way.

Why not leave everything and everyone alone and let it sort itself out? I won't tell you what to do and you won't tell me what to do. Bring in the government for basic things like national defense and leave them out of the rest of it. I know it is a strange idea, but being free has its upsides.

Feminists

Have you noticed that the so-called feminists are generally the ugly women? If they are not ugly they reek of self-deprecation. Real feminists are women that understand they are sexy, feel sexy and that they have the power. Fuck what the man thinks. The real feminists just get the job done. Remember, it was prostitutes that built that great liberal Mecca known as San Francisco.

Beer Pong

You know what's more boring then getting a hand-job? Beer Pong. Once I leave this place I am hoping that this game will be a distant memory and not something I have to contend with on a regular basis. What does it say about us as human beings when we have been playing a drinking game since the times of ancient Greece that involves some form of throwing a ball into an alcoholic beverage? What's particularly worse about beer pong in Eugene is that for the most part people play water pong and hold a can of beer out of fear that the ball will be dirty. This is why there are warm water cups to dunk the ball into in REAL LIFE. What the fuck is the point of playing a drinking game that doesn't alter the rate that you consume alcohol. I cringe at how popular the game is and think that the people that enjoy playing it are stupider than monkeys and twice as ugly.

Moochers

"Can I get a shot?"
"Can I get a hit?"
"Can I bum a cigarette off of you?"
"NO!!!! FUCK OFF!!!!"

First of all, that shit costs money...money that your "friends" could be spending on more contraband for themselves. If you have a bad habit, or multiple bad habits, it's up to you to fund it. Nobody likes a mooch. Nobody! It isn't anyone's responsibility but your own to get you inebriated enough to tolerate all the other people at the party you are attending. Your friends and whoever else you happen to latch on to shouldn't have to supply you with alcohol and all the other fun supplies that guarantee an exciting, albeit blurry, night. Get some of your own alcohol to drink and some of your own dope to smoke you lazy, good for nothing bum!

SF Giants fans

Why do I hate fans of the San Francisco Giants, you may ask. Well, transported denizen of "the bay, bro", I'll tell you. It has a lot to do with the fact that I have hate for most fans of successful teams. But more than that is my general disdain for the stereotypical and yet far too common behavior of this growing student population. And its symbols: The interlocking orange and black S and F. The Posey jersey sweatshirt. The 2012 championship T-shirt. Your being here represents the systemic problems of a University that cares more about making money from Californians and international students than serving its state. Traipsing through campus, you are aloof to the fact that your presence gives me general discomfort. At the same time, I know that that you're only here because your state sucks at doing economy. So keep coming to your classes in that Giants hat; just know that some people hate you for it.

People who can't even dress semi-formally

Something that really makes me laugh is seeing some douche who is trying his best to dress semi-formally or be taken seriously wearing business attire. If that shirt were any looser you would be wearing a sail. How fucking hard is it to buy a shirt that fits? This is 'murica where clothes are cheap as balls even nice clothes are cheap. This is because of some poor kid in Vietnam who huffs glue in between shifts in order to have the energy to make a shirt. So don't let all that huffing go to waste and buy a nice shirt instead. Furthermore, just because your shirt has a collar does not mean you look respectable. In fact the only times you wore your "semi-formal" clothes before your stupid greek life event was for some shindig where your parents salary was on the line, or for that time you had to go to municipal court for your MIP and harassment charge. In fact you look so ridiculous in that baby blue shirt and orange tie that you should drop out and go to clown college. Your mother should've swallowed because it would have saved all of us from looking at the goddamn fashion disaster that is your professional life.

Smokers without integrity

I really hate smokers that cannot figure out how to properly dispose of their butts. Why bother putting ashtrays out if they are just going to be thrown on the ground? While it is true that a number of people may not like the smell of smoke, they hate the sight of cigarette butts all over the place even more. This creates animosity for those of us that do not throw our trash on the ground. These are same the smokers that wonder why we get kicked out of everywhere. Snuff it out and then throw it in the trashcan you were standing by.

Lip gloss

Spending money on shiny goop for your lips is not only distasteful, it's just plain silly. Your lip gloss is not "poppin" it's only making you look like you just sucked a dick. Red, lipsticked lips can be sexy, sparkling glittery pink ones induce vomiting. You aren't accentuating them, you're just drawing attention to your slightly chapped and very desperate lips. Do you really think that making your lips glossy with some kind of imitation semen is going to change the fact that nobody wants to kiss you?

MY INTERNSHIP

The internship position with OSPIRG (Oregon Student Public Interest Research Group) was basically given to me, and I received little orientation and no clear direction. My first chapter meeting went a little something like this:

Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain! We'll give you class credit. You can even have a title and put this on your resume!

Their class visits were very similar: they do their greener-than-thou presentation, talk about how great the organization is and how much they do for students, but neglect to tell you anything real. It's all very superficial and empty. Either they are keeping it a secret or the ignoramuses simply don't fucking know. It boggled my mind! Honestly, some of its members don't even know what the acronym stands for! But that was of little importance. What's important are the individual campaigns us students run, right?

IFUCK OSPIRG!

I was on the Hunger and Homelessness campaign. We were the only campaign actually acting on issues in Eugene. It was something I really cared about, and my four teammates were all very involved as well. Everyone else in OSPIRG worked on bullshit campaigns. They were there for the sake of "be involved" and to "build their resume". It took me a couple weeks to realize that OSPIRG didn't really care about textbooks, homelessness or Crater Lake. They pick issues that are so grand and broad that they are unattainable. I was the only one constantly asking, "What the fuck are we doing here, anyway?" and an answer along the lines of "Getting big money out of politics," was usually sputtered out.

Now, why is this organization so keen on keeping their name the same at both the state level and at the UO level? Students of UO were forced to give the organization $170,000— which is half of the organization's total budget. It's all a means to an end because the only way they can get public approval is by duping students into believing progress has been made. If the majority of UO students were to ask this "public interest" group to work on a different set of issues, students would be very disappointed at the answer: the umbrella organization controls its student subsidiaries.

Chapter Chair Zack Mulholland says that Oregon State PIRG and Oregon Student PIRG "are two completely different and unrelated corporations." Then, when asked whether it was legal to claim the same name and take credit for the same "accomplishments" on the website, he may as well have said, "Get the fuck out of here with all your damn questions, kid." I even begged on multiple occasions for funding so we could have an event and every single time I was denied. We were NEVER given any money directly. OSPIRG payed the 15 dollars to print flyers for our fundraising events. We had to raise 100% of the funds by ourselves, then OSPIRG took credit for all the work they didn't do.

When OSPIRG was defunded for the 2013-2014 year, organizing director Jenn Engstrom decided that freezing all campaigns and spending 15 hours per week trying to get funding back was a worthwhile expenditure of interns' time rather than continue working on the campaigns (the ones that OSPIRG are allegedly such big players in). It was as if when they had caught wind of being defunded, all the textbook-buying, hunger-ending, Crater Lake-cleaning wands were locked up and all my fellow interns were forced to go around campus, asking students to vote for us.

Most students just went along with it. Unfortunately, the people that are attracted to OSPIRG are generally the tag-along activists anyway. They were only into service work for the position or to build their resume. Meanwhile we've got people like Engstrom and Nikodem who are actually in on that shit making money off of us! Oh the shame! I knew I should have gone to OSU.

As for their claims of being "non partisan"? I'll give you a direct quote, unaltered, of the queen snake in the grass herself, Jenn Engstrom. She said this about a piece of environmental legislation she wrote and tried to pass: "Those goddamn Republicans killed my bill."

Rape

I hate rape. I really really do. Most of all I just fucking hate and am absolutely fucking perplexed by the utter inability of people to abstain from raping. I mean, it's like hot tubbing. All you have to do in order to avoid getting your Johnson stuck in a pump is to not stick your dick in it, that's all, world's simplest solution. Just don't do it. The very same goes for rape, all you have to do to prevent rape is to not fucking rape someone, just fucking don't.

Now I understand that you have been told your entire life that you can do anything, that you're the shit and that women are pieces of meat that are at your disposal to empty your seed into but the truth is that they aren't. Low and behold, some women don't actually want to fuck you. It might be because they realize that you're in a frat or that you're just a generally awful person or because they're already taken. So when they say "No," just accept it. I know that it crushes your newly inflated ego but hey shotgun a beer, brag about it and your ego will be back to its puffed up state despite the said dismissal from a lady.

So there you stand alone with your Natty Ice in your hand and you're thinking about how much you want to rape that girl take heed and follow these tips instead:

1. Find another one:

While being rejected might sting you should realize that there are other fish in the sea. There are always girls with such low self-esteem that they will actually consent to two minutes of mentally scaring sex with you.

2. Settle for a lesser offense:

Whatever happened to the graceful art of groping? The good ol' days of slapping a woman's ass and calling her babe are gone. Quell your inner cave man and do something equally satisfying but less life ruining such as groping or become a peeping tom. The art of peeping into girls bedrooms at night seems to be abandoned, sadly. The opportunity awaits to jack it all you want in the privacy of her dark backyard while she has a sexy pillow fight with her roommate. So make your own perversion flourish by embracing the secrecy and ninjasque quality to both peeping and groping.

3. Go home and fuck yourself:

Let's be honest here; you're a bit of a connoisseur when it comes to your own sexual distortions. You will not accept just watching a snuff film and beating off; no you want something more real and intense. Well go home, light a scented candle and fuck yourself instead, all the action but none of the consequences also no one knows what you like better than yourself.

I hope you will take these tips and put them to good use. I hope you realize that there are equally satisfying alternatives to actually raping someone. So keep calm, don't rape. Just choose well.

Californian Refugees

Oregon, in all its glory, has a refugee problem. The problem is worsened by the fact that most of them come from California. See, the period after WWII, Californians came together and decided they wanted to be the greatest state in America. They invested their own money into infrastructure, water systems, public spaces, and an education system that became the envy of the world. The children of these intelligent people — baby boomers — grew up superior to other American counterparts in every way. Around thirtyish years ago, Californian voters decided that they weren't happy with the current system and wanted a change. The children of the Baby Boomers were close to finishing school and it didn't make sense to pay for these services once they "had no obligation". The Californian baby boomers attacked "big government", taxes, fiscal accountability, and implemented a "three-strikes" judicial policy that encouraged jails to be always at capacity.

So now California is beginning to suffer because of its selfish decisions. Infrastructure is failing, water systems are leaky, cities are declaring bankruptcy, and education has become a fickle issue with no end. Some police stations no longer accept emergency calls for burglaries and runaway children. Californian universities are still "okay", but over time they will not be able to keep up with increasing population rates. Battles must be chosen wisely, budgets must be cut and the people that need these services to prosper will suffer the most.

For now, Californian universities are some of the most competitive institutions to be accepted into — this is evident by the number of Californians attending the University of Oregon that are too stupid to attend universities that they grew up dreaming of attending. Some may think that opinion is too harsh but the simple truth is that if they could be in California attending university they would be. So fuck them and fuck you.

Retirees from California are coming to Oregon in droves as the cost of living is significantly less than living in Palo Alto — they come here with their old money and live more comfortably. When they come they bring their own inward-looking political beliefs and have no interests in improving our schools or infrastructure. A perfect example of an outsider trying to fuck things up for the rest of us is Art Robinson with his ideas of turning eastern Oregon into a nuclear waste dumping ground. These outsiders have no vested interest in Oregon and are detrimental to the future of our glorious state. So when I say I hate California, I genuinely mean fuck California. Los Angeles is the armpit of America and a breeding ground for disease. This disease will spread into the Pacific Northwest unless something serious is done (something like a being-from-California tax).

Yodeling in the Gully

I like to consider myself somewhat of an outdoorsman and a traveler. I have walked in dense jungles and through barren flatlands adorned with speckled shrubbery. I have climbed high peaks and waded in moist swamps. I have been to distant foreign lands and looked danger straight in the eye without flinching.

However, this one adventure was and is my nemesis. I am not afraid to say; that I really hate yodeling in the gully. It seems like a somewhat odd activity to yodel in a gully, especially to an outsider.

However, the reason behind this exploit was in fact a lady. Yes, I know it is a cliché but I must admit that a lady was the driving force behind this. Her name was Venus. I met these particular lass by chance; she swooped into my life and swept me off my feet. I was instantaneously smitten with her and her whole persona. She seemed to be exactly what I had been looking for; a strong-minded and open fellow traveler.

While we both shared a curious nature her experiences were different than mine. But I was eager to learn from her ways and get a new perspective so I asked her what she loved to do. She exclaimed that she loved when someone yodeled in the gully with her. I was just as unaware of what yodeling the gullet entitled as you are now, but I was young and naïve so I decided that I was going to dive into this new activity and embrace my new companion by yodeling in the gully.

We set out the very next day on our grand voyage. It was a short trip from our starting point and we arrived there shortly after setting out early in the morning. I realize now that I was vastly unprepared for what I was about to experience. As we reached our destination I laid my eyes upon the scene and what I saw was something new; a long deep, dark hole filled to the brim with dense vegetation. Venus looked at me with glee and urged me to start hiking down the ravine, she said she would follow right behind but that turned out to be a lie. I descended further down into the darkness of the chasm.

It started to dawn on me as I went further and further down that the ground I was standing on was not all that solid. In fact, it was mushy and emitted a foul odor, like seafood that had been left out in the sun too long. I also realized that Venus was not at all behind me, in fact she was still standing by the edge of the ravine. She yelled at me to start yodeling and so I did. Important to notice here is the fact that I have no experience or training regarding yodeling at all. Venus became very excited even by my pitiful attempts at the art of yodeling.

After yodeling for 5 minutes I called out for Venus but I received no reply. At that point I realized that I had no idea what I was doing, my jaw was fatigued and my neck was substantially strained. I had made my way deep down into that dark, wet place so I start to turn back. Venus noticed that I had stopped so she loudly urged me to keep going but I had had enough and made my way up to her.

In the car ride back she was very pouty and upset; she claimed that I wasn't satisfying her and that she didn't want to see me again; I obliged her by leaving her on the side of the road.

My breath smelled foul for the rest of that day.

People that take photos of their food

Why do people take photos of their food? An appealing looking plate of food will have a good spread of color and appear visually balanced. Although that photograph of food looks artistic, you are the furthest thing from an artist there is. A toddler with a camera could take the same photo so stop trying to develop a portfolio on instagram. A real photographer (which I am not) is able to capture a visual scene and show that image to others exactly the way he/she saw it. Your photos are a visual scene designed and put together by a chef. So stop broadcasting to everyone that you have an expensive camera phone because sooner or later someone is going to take it.

ASUO Elections

The worst thing about it is being stopped on the way to class to be told who to vote for without any reasoning whatsoever. And when you insist that you don't like voting when you are uninformed, they proceed to tell you that the other side doesn't care enough about sustainability without giving any other information. I don't give a FUCK about sustainability with all the other issues there are to care about, so you aren't helping your case any. Some people here have managed to slip through the cracks of this leftist indoctrination camp, so you shouldn't assume that everyone shares your ideals.

Freshmen

I really, really hate them. I wanted to start this out comparing them to post-shower shits, but that does a disservice to that most unclean practice. Really, they're just vultures. Vultures on any good thing that they just can't comprehend doesn't belong to them. I'm not talking about drinking — I'm a hearty proponent of underage drinking. What I'm talking about is those stupid fucking freshmen who see nothing wrong with trying to grab a beer out of someone's backpack while they're not looking and putting it in their stupid fucking messenger bag that has all kinds of "ironic" buttons on it. We all saw Office Space, you little gits. You want one of my extra PBRs? Fucking ask me. You make me support the social host ordinance as it will do something to discourage you from drinking like morons and ensuring the stigma remains. Just go to Lane for the first year where you belong.

I hate people who watch the Daily Show for news:

If you cite the Daily Show with Jon

Stewart then you are a moron and I hate you. The Daily Show is not a news source and Jon Stewart himself has said that you shouldn't be using the Daily Show as a news source. So when you cite the Daily Show in class all your doing is letting everyone know that you are not well-read and that you would rather get your news from a 20 minute TV show as opposed to analyzing the internet for the truth and coming to your own conclusions. You are the reason apathy exists because if you can't get off your ass to read about worldly events and then pretend in class that you are aware of geopolitics you are sowing the seeds to everyone's demise because who knows, maybe someone is even lazier than you and dumb enough to believe you.

The only thing worse than flushing out a dead fetus is having cramps! Fuck taking pills, and fuck that copper wire IUD shit! I will take the more natural path: straighten myself out a coat hanger and let it all loose. I just hate when I reach the end of that first trimester. It's not that I find my growing belly to be uncomfortable or unsightly, but rather that it signifies the end of my 90-day guarantee of no periods. This tends to outrage people nowadays, however and I am forced to practice this in private, which severely compromises my safety. Once the damn thing is out, I can continue fucking who I want for another three months. But then I have to endure these bloody cramps until I get pregggo again. CHARLES DENSON

It's been a full year, but I still just can't get over it. Last year, some combination of efforts by a Mr. Charles Denson and a Mr. Manny Garcia managed to phish the email passwords of opposing campaigns' efforts through what was reported as a faked Google form.

He's just been one of those campus figures for so long. "LTD Guy", "Jesus guy", "that guy with the fro." I've always felt kind of sorry for the guy, but since this is not "The Pity Issue", I guess I'll Seth-and-Amy-Really?! his decisions in the elections for a while.

Really? You thought you'd get away with giving a freshman on the campaign a check and telling her to write one for the same amount? To the campaign your wife was working on? Really?

And on that note, Really?! You got legally married to her, later supporting her campaign financially, and it never once occurred that your involvement in a campus group might be something she might want to disclose? Despite being around the state's politics and campus government for the past year at least, you were indignant when it was reported when anyone raised the obvious conflict of interest? Really?

In response to all of this, you chose to have someone commit cyberfraud against all campaigns that were not your wife's?

This series of scandals has been done to death, of course, but it also hasn't in a way. Because this year the con court caused the ASUO elections to come to basically the same sort of halt it did last year. Where one was disputed on account of campaign T-shirts that were reportedly being given out for votes, the other had to do with a federal crime, phishing, and even that hasn't been fully addressed. Your involvement in the ASUO elections the past several years has made it a joke of a process (bearing in mind that a Commentator candidate in 2011 had a guitar-bound troubadour, who played him in, played him out and had a tone for each speech he made. You're still worse for the process by a mile).

I will say, some respect for going out with a bang, rather than a whimper. Because no one chose to press charges, you got away with a diploma and no records of the fact that you stole passwords and destroyed digital records. Not everyone in student government gets to say that. Bravo.

And, in the most visceral, you are the face to us all of an organization with which I vehemently disagree. It's not that you help ensure clean water and safe toys, fight for cheaper textbooks and represent the PEOPLE, man! Because you don't. Your handlers do. I've seen letters of support on your page reading "This legislation is here because of support from OSPIRG and the fight of their advocates," and that's really cool. The reason why no one ever talks about OSPIRG's (the student version's) accomplishments is because those quotes never include "...and we mean the student PIRG here, not the quasi-sinkhole that is the umbrella organization."

The thing you spent all this time fighting for, lobbying individual members of Senate for, going to meetings repeating the notions of “student voice and power” for, used you, man. It's using any and all of its student volunteers as a way to make sure its place holds firm at campuses as a source of money for a non-student organization.

I hate that you never could pretend to understand the reasons why people had to oppose OSPIRG's place on campus. Your incredulous look and insistence of it as a student good, even while we remain the only campus that's kept its home in the past decade outside of Lane and Southern.

The student branch of OSPIRG started high-mindedly on the UO campus with the highly publicized trip of Ralph Nader and his Raiders through Oregon:

“A student-financed public interest research group, employing fulltime researchers, lawyers, accountants, engineers, economists, etc. and utilizing student investigators can effectively represent student interests. It is capable of channeling student resources into a force that can go off the campus and into the community. Since it employs full time public interest professionals, it will not fall into the semester rhythms that have plagued most student groups.”

-The PIRG's explanation of the plan to students, 1971.

This all would be very great if it were observed; however, the only part of it that seems true is that we pay money and a good portion of it goes to researchers and lawyers. Since the personnel are the same for both the student and the state organizations, and we have no evidence to suggest that students have control over what they want to advocate on in a dispute between the organizations, how can we justify that this organization is fulfilling its mission to students?

GAH, I digress. This is the rage that you continue to send me into. Thinking about your face sends me into monologues on the history of OSPIRG and its failings in recent times — the same time coincidentally that your bosses started requesting unprecedented fees of the ASUO ... probably to counteract the fact that Oregon State and Portland State didn't want you anymore! Again, Jesus Christ.

Summing up, FUCK OSPIRG, I hate your face, it reminds me of things that I despise, and anytime I think about it, it's all I can do to stop from droning on about the excesses of the student incidental fee.

White People

White people are by far the worst racial group to deal with. It's not that they come from a position of cultural dominance; it's certainly not because of the history of colonialism, slavery, and the "new world order". No, it is simply because they shamelessly steal other people's cultures and call them their own. If I had a nickel for everytime I wanted to punch one of you people in the face, I would be the richest man in town. Your dancing, stories, food, and culture is bland and unexciting (this is why you invent and celebrate holidays like Cinco de Mayo).

enough jewelry to make Rick Ross blush. Frat parties are full of stupid, sexualized dancing that was invented on TV to make you feel like you're a rap star so that you admire and buy the products. And so this vicious cycle of bullshit behavior is created that has no place in real life, fed to kids and exported overseas. So if you wonder why America is going to shit, it's simply because the majority of American parents allowed a television to educate young whitey rather than family and community.

White American culture, that shit on TV and all over the radio waves, gets designed in a sterile conference room by a bunch of douches who hire consultants to find out what is cool amongst kids. They put on TV what they think young people think is cool and, as a result, young suburbanites learn how to act from watching TV. This is why I much prefer hanging out with crude, rude rednecks because they have a sense of community, their heads are ground firmly in reality and never once mistaken themselves as the star of a music video in a fancy car, wearing stupid clothes, and held down by

I laugh so hard every time a white person claims to be a "global citizen" or "colorblind". Being "colorblind" is the newest form of racism that allows one to justify ignorance of other cultures and sweep differences beneath the rug. Diversity is the spice of life and differences should be acknowledged and celebrated. When white people apologize for their race and the actions of those before, they are letting everyone know that they have a really shitty liberal arts education and that their skill set makes them overly idealistic and unemployable.

It is the fucking worst when a white person travels overseas, because when they come

Sudsy Says:

"It's only a hate crime if you don't have a lawyer."

You can take our freedom and our land, Whitey, but you leave our culture alone!

back they are going to wear some goofy hat or a shawl that looks butt-fucking-ugly. They come back with new ideas and pretend to have an accent. But the fucking worst is when a white person comes back from overseas and believes him/herself to be an expert of the culture they visited. Bitch, the only thing you're an expert of is the inside of a Marriott hotel bar drinking shitty vodka and having your ankles in the air as the bartender nails that loosy-goose pussy of yours. Fucking stay home and do the world a favor by watching Honey Boo Boo and blogging about your cat.

Why do white people think they're Steven Seagal or Chuck Norris? Allow me to recount a personal anecdote in which these "bros" were at this bar in Shanghai talking about how tough they were and being generally aggressive. When they left the club they got the shit kicked out of them by three tiny Chinamen. Afterwards, the defeated party reacted in typical bro fashion (taking shirt off, screaming at air, making idle threats that will never come true). White people, for the most part, cannot fight. The harder one's life is, the better a fighter he or she is. Your pussy-ass suburbanite (i.e. most white people) is not a good fighter, and working out in a gym only slows down one's punching speed. You give a pussy white suburban guy two shots of tequila and they're all, "WhAt Bro. U WaNT 2 FITE?!" No, I don't want to fucking fight, I got better shit going on and I am not interested in having charges pressed against me for removing the testicles of a soft white little bitch. And then when a white person does get their ass beat, unless another white person did it, they're all like, "Yo, that's racist". Fuck that and fuck you. This article is racist, and you are a piece of shit. Get it straight.

Fuck you. Yes, you right there. Yeah, I'm talking to you. No, not your portly friend. I am talking to you, you fucking thundercunt. I fucking hate you. I hate every fucking thing about you. I fucking hate the way you look. You dress like you're a colorblind schizophrenic hobo; the Columbine killers were more stylish than you are. I've seen you around and you're the absolute fucking worse. Having full blown AIDS would be preferable to even seeing you at a distance. Furthermore, the Nazi war crimes seem tame in comparison to your parents' absolute wrong of not aborting you.

Sheets can be washed for a reason, how your mom couldn't handle getting a little sticky that one time is weird considering she has taken more loads than a dumptruck. I am also thoroughly convinced that your father is a complete jerkoff; he looks like he didn't finish high school so he knew about dropping out but not how to pull out. You probably consider yourself to be hot shit but let me make it very clear to you that you are just shit. 110% pure grade A feces.

You're also probably one of those fucktarts that say "I'm x but I'm y in credits" which also makes you a perfect, rotten fucking douche. Nobody gives a flying motherfuck about your academic standing. You get a little air because you got some action but let's be honest there: your partner was fugly as hell and basically black out drunk so not really something you should be proud of. In fact there is fucking nothing you should be proud of. You haven't accomplished anything noteworthy or admirable since you were potty trained.

You are so fucking pathetic that it is unfathomable to me how you even put on pants in the morning: the concept of one leg at a time seems to be beyond you. So all in all I absolutely, fully, utterly and completely fucking despise you. You are the most erogenous mistake in universal history.

I recently had the misfortune of coming across one of your pathetic excuses for a magazine. And after wasting 20 or so minutes of my life, i concluded that you are all virgins. You are all just like those douchebags on youtube that talk shit behind a computer screen. Also, you D-bags seem to be under the impression that your little koolaid-look-alike guy is just the funniest thing ever! Newsflash: its not funny. And neither are you. Now your probably thinking to yourselves, well this asshole emailing us doesnt even have the balls to tell us personally how he feels. How does it feel to be the victim of a keyboard warrior? And youre all probably crowded around your little computer screen laughing like 3rd grade girls. Oh i lied at the begenning of the email when i said reading your magazine was a waste of time. Because i picked your magazine up in the first place, i no longer have to go to the store to purchase more toilet paper because there is an excess of the oregon commentator laying around. There is one more thing i would like to touch on. Because you guys take these weird pictures with guns and what not, i have seen how pathetic you all truely are.
